Trinity College,

Somebody once told me that eating raw cookie dough could lead to salmonella. I really didn't care and this has nothing to do with the election at hand, but I had to start with something.

In an environment as stressful as Trinity College, it's important to find the time to laugh. That's why I love the Lit - it's goofy, and silly, and no matter what craziness is thrown your way, it will always be there for you every Wednesday night.

I want the Lit to truly belong to all of Trinity College. I want the humour to be something everyone can appreciate, for there to always be non-alcohol beverages available at every debate, and I hope to work with the Trin Life director to provide more information on debates to a broader audience.

Let me let you love the Lit, too - elect a Prime Minister who will follow through on her promises (no offence, Trudeau). I also promise I won't fuck up Bubbly. Seriously guys, just let me plan Bubbly.
